| 到達目標 | A language is rather a tool for communicating than knowledge to study. The best way to learn a language is to make it alive by using it. Although we are learning in a classroom, we need to put ourselves in real situations outside the school. Therefore, in this class, students will practice simulated conversations taken place in a hospital and naturally remember useful expressions and basic medical terms. | | | | |

| 1～8 | No particular textbooks will be used in class. Instead, practical conversations printed in handouts will be given and role-played each time. Each lesson will be started by reviewing what was studied last time through games, Q and As, and other activities. Then new conversations of the week will be introduced and practiced in pairs or groups. In order to vary ways of learning and raise students' interests in English, various activities, such as singing, role-playing and group discussions, will sometimes be performed in class. The goal is set to learn with great fun. That is the way language learning is most efficient. | | | | |
